It's called Fairyland, it's a separate magical dimension from Earth, there are fairies though there used to be a lot more of them, and most of the monarchs we see or hear about are queens. I'll be very surprised if this isn't a lot of people's favorite childhood read in the year. If you're still looking for additional, arresting reading material with a fairy tale lean, I loved Neil Gaiman's The Ocean at the End of the Lane so much that I took it to a wedding.

Catherynne M. Valente Publisher: Twelve-year-old September lives in Omaha, and used to have an ordinary life, until her father went to war and her mother went to work. Whimsical story with engaging language. This is a wonderful, imaginative story full of fun wordplay. Rather the fairyland rules literally made Mallow disappear, though what happened afterwards is another story.

She gains great friends and allies in a half-wyvern, half-libra. It is violence, and slavery, and pain, and abandonment, and cruelty, and bureaucracy.
