Oh my, then I've been misled by many guidebooks. Ok, so apparently in English you can say tip for what we call service and say extra-tip for pourboire. In fact, in France it's always included it always seems very strange to me to go to a country where it's not since it's mandatory:

Tu pourrais lui laisser un pourboire papa. Neither 'service' nor 'tip' were included in the suggested translations by duo, and this is on the new word exercise! At first, this was honestly distributed in the same way.

Neither 'service' nor 'tip' were included in the suggested translations by duo. It seems to be a difference between the practical use of the phrase--which does in fact translate to "the tip is included" and the more technically correct or formal translation of it.
